TO CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY—Brightwood Baptist Church will celebrate its 15th anniversary Sunday, October 23. Rev. H. P. Gauldin, inset, is the church's organizer and pastor.

Brightwood Church To Celebrate 15th Birthday

Brightwood Baptist Church, located on the old Reidsville Road, of which Rev. H. P. Gauldin is the organizer and pastor, will celebrate its 15th anniversary with an all-day service Sunday, October 23. The structure which followed a tent revival on the same site, was begun in the fall of 1940 and the first service was held in the church February 16, 1941.

The church was chartered with the following seven members: Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Cocklee, Mrs. Bertha Fields, Mrs. J. F. Jarrett, Mrs. Worth Henderson, J. W. Holder and Mrs. Beil Pitchford. All of the charter members are still living, and are still members of the church with the exception of Mr. Holder and Mrs. Pitchford, who died several years ago.

The present membership of the church is 767 with an average of 401 attending Sunday School. The church recently remodeled the auditorium, installing new pews and choir seats, and a baptistry. The auditorium has a seating capacity of 590 and the choir seats 75. There are 12 Sunday School classrooms of which Carl Ham is superintendent.

Ample parking space is found on the church lot and in addition the church purchased an adjacent lot across the road from the church which can also be used for parking. The building, lot and parsonage is valued at $114,000.

A revival meeting will start Sunday under leadership of Rev. Mr. Gauldin. Dinner will be served on the grounds and Rev. G. W. Swinney of Glen Hope Baptist Church in Burlington, will speak at 3:00 p.m. He will return Monday night to preach the remaining nights of the revival.

The public is cordially invited to attend these services when there will be special singing.

EDNA PLANT SUGGESTION—Roy Nichols of Edna Plant Shop suggested a new way to cover clearers on drawing frames. His idea was to pull the cloth over each outside edge and fasten it down with an aluminum strip instead of glueing the cloth on the slat. This prevents clearers from coming loose, lengthens life of the clothing, makes it easier to recloth after the initial installation and permits removal of the slat on one side to wash the clearer cloth and put it back on the frame again. Mr. Nichols received a cash award from Cone Mills for his idea.

Bickering Without Accomplishment

Although many citizens who at one time were most enthusiastic about a Greensboro Auditorium-Coliseum in the last few years seem to have completely lost interest, by and large the citizens of our fine town are still interested but also greatly bewildered.

It is realized that it is far easier to criticize and find fault than to render constructive services, but in the case of the Auditorium-Coliseum we do not feel that anyone would be sticking his or her neck out by casting stones in many directions and for many reasons.

A review of the early days of the Coliseum activity will clearly point out that what we now have in the making, or what is now being considered, argued, or debated, is far different from what the group who unselfishly launched the program planned or anticipated.

Most parts of the original plan, including financing, have been radically changed. We realize that with changing times the best laid plans have to be modified, but what has happened to the real motives, thoughts, and plans behind the generous contributions in services and funds is far from encouraging.

Those who were true pioneers in the project, and who if they had been given the right kind of cooperative support would have accomplished their meritorious objectives years ago, have had every reason to become thoroughly disgusted and to say "to heck with it." Yet, some of them are still in there fighting for something to come out of the unfortunate stew.

We know that many of the differences of opinion as to sites, type of structure, services to be rendered, etc. were based on honest beliefs and opinions, but we also know that the best interest of the community has not been served; that thousands of dollars could have been saved if the construction work had been done years ago; that our future tax burden would have been lighter if the original plan had been put into effect. In fact, there is little doubt but that present ideas do not dovetail in with the plans under which the program was launched and contributions secured.

Be that all as it may, if Greensboro is to have such facilities—and they are badly needed—the reputation of the town and the patience of a lot of people cannot tolerate much more bickering without accomplishment.

Time Most Valued Trading Medium

Charlotte, N. C.—Under the American philosophy of manufacture time is the most valuable trading medium. And American built textile machines that give continuous, sturdy and economical performance offer textile mills the best opportunity to stay in business and make a profit, said Mildred Barnwell Andrews to the Charlotte Textile Club at their first fall meeting.

Charles Connor, manager The Anheuser Busch Textile Division, is president of the Club which is comprised of approximately 300 young textile executives of the Carolina area.

Mrs. Andrews, executive secretary of the American Textile Machinery Association, discussed economic findings of the European and the American textile industries based upon observations of her recent two month tour of textile educational and research centers of eight countries of the European continent and the United Kingdom. She made the trip as a member of the group representing the National Council for Textile Education.

"America is great because it has good tools to work with, better tools, I say. Tools produced in America for American use, designed to fit the American factory system, the American philosophy of manufacture, the American economy. Better tools for use than tools made in any other country. It is true that some of the machines made for textile mills by other countries are just beautiful, as machines go. But for continuous able, sturdy and economical performance the American textile machine can not be met by any other.

"Long ago the United States embarked upon an industrial and legislative regime that made time our most valuable trading medium. Wages are high and we are glad they are because that is our great source of purchasing power ...

But because wages are high, time saved is money made. More efficiency, greater productivity, fewer shutdowns, high quality at lowest per unit cost, all those things total up to the goal of the successful American factory. That is our American philosophy, continuous operation of automatic machines. That is especially true in the textile industry of the United States.

We could not have it without the many developments toward automation over the past 100 years in textile machinery. Actually in more than a century no new development in textile machinery has been made except that which originated in the United States ... or which was made commercially feasible by the American textile machinery manufacturers. I returned from our visit to European textile and research centers with utmost admiration for American built textile machines. They are truly modern marvels of efficiency," said Mrs. Andrews.

"European machines are not built for such continuous high speeds, as American industrial economics demand and cannot stand up to it. European countries could not afford from a power-cost factor to indulge in such continuous high speeds. And an American spinning mill could not afford to operate on current high labor costs unless it was at top speed and continuously," she said.

"The sad thing that we see today is that American mills are slow to modernize. And that at the current rate of replacement of their almost continuously operated spindles it would take 40 years to re-equip the industry," she added.

Describing the American textile industry as having nearly 800,000 automatic looms, Mrs. Andrews said, "When you consider that an American built high speed automatic loom makes 300,000 interlacings of threads a minute, and that it runs with a mechanical failure average only once in 72 million interlacings, or a loom stopping for any reason only once every 27 million interlacings of yarns it certainly is a wonderful machine! A modern American built automatic loom runs at 97% efficiency. And it fits in with the American way of manufacturing because it was designed for that purpose ... And to help textile mills of this country make a profit by saving time."

Mrs. Andrews pointed out that the basic difference in manufacturing philosophies of today was undergoing change, and that in most European countries the post war trend is an emphasis on technological research—with large contributions from cities, industries, and governments toward this end.

"In this country the textile industry has been largely dependent upon the textile machinery manufacturers for all the research that has been done in technological development. They have financed the research on machine refinements, technological advancements that have made our textile industry great. Member firms of the American Textile Machinery Association have spent vast amounts on research and development programs. In one year out of all the total research dollars spent by the entire textile manufacturing industry, by all textile schools research departments, by independent research labs, and by the government agencies including the Army, Navy and the Air Force and the Department of Agriculture, a sum equal to 15% of that total was spent on research by only 5 textile machine builders.

"The textile industry faces grave problems and must take advantage of every technological development, every time saving development that is available in order to meet the flood of highly competitive goods that under reduced tariffs will pour into this country. The only way we in the U. S. industries can meet the low wage rates and other conditions of foreign countries is by increased machine efficiency. That is gained only by continuous modernization," she said.

W. Frank Lowell, Senior vice-president of Soco-Lowell Shops, Boston, Massachusetts is president of the American Textile Machinery Association, the group representing the textile machine builders of the U. S.

Fire In Home Biggest Threat To Life Safety

The biggest, most expensive fires happen in factories, stores and other non-residential locations, but your life is in greatest danger from fire right in the "safety" of your own home. More people die in home fires than in all others combined, says the National Fire Protection Association.

"Be as fire safety conscious at home as you should be at work, the NFPA urges." In your office or shop, no smoking signs remind you of the fire menace. There are no signs in your house, so it's up to you to remind yourself and your family often not to smoke in bed, or around flammable liquids, paper or trash.

"Your own vigilance is your home's best defense against the danger of children playing with matches, or of defective or overloaded wiring, of dirty chimneys and heating equipment.

"No foreman or office manager," the NFPA warns, "is going to reprimand you for not keeping hot ashes in covered metal containers, for letting rubbish pile up in the cellar or attic, or for handling gasoline and kerosene carelessly. At home you're the 'boss' and yours is the responsibility of seeing that fire rules are obeyed."

The NFPA urges that every family start a permanent anti-fire crusade based on the slogan for this year's Fire Prevention Week (Oct. 9-15): "Don't give fire a place to start."

The Bible Speaks To Your Need

By Rev. W. L. Bennett, Pastor
Sixteenth St. Baptist Church

Are you facing life or are you trying to run away or escape from life's realities? Scores of people have found joy, meaning and purpose in life through Jesus Christ. But literally millions refuse to face their defeat and their sins and are trying to escape in other ways. These false escapes are the Devil's way of blinding you to your real need while you plunge deeper and deeper into the pit of despair. What are some of these escape people are following?

First, there is the escape of sinful pleasure. This escape is Satan's oldest trick for destroying the souls of men. Satan deceives the multitudes in believing if they can go enough, see enough, eat enough, drink enough, spend enough, dress enough, amuse themselves enough and satisfy the flesh enough, they will have found genuine joy and meaning in living. This is a big lie. Sinful pleasure is never an escape. It is a blind alley to destruction and hell itself.

Second, there is the escape of materialistic desire. The only security millions have is their bank accounts, houses, real estate, pay checks or just "things" in general. But with all this material security, men are more insecure than ever. Security is on the heart and soul. It is never realized through externals. When you become absorbed with money or the things money can buy, you close out God, who is the Source of all true peace, joy and happiness. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon," (Mt. 6:24) and "the love of money is the root of all evil." (1 Tim. 6:10) Materialism is never an escape. It, too, is a blind alley to destruction and hell itself.

Third, there is the escape of "religion," so called. Ours is the most religious age in history. But much of the religious profession of our day is obviously "a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." (2 Tim. 3:5). Church membership stands at an all-time high. At the same time crime, divorce, drunkenness, immorality, Sabbath desecration, and law breaking stand at an all time high. What's wrong? The answer is that too many have tried to escape into religion, into the church, into the good graces of the preacher, and the socially respectable. But they have not surrendered their hearts to Jesus Christ and become "new creatures" through His saving blood and power. If 90,000,000 Americans (the present church membership) had been born again, they would transform this sin-cursed land into a spiritual utopia. "Religion" is never an escape. It, too, is a blind alley to destruction and to hell itself.

Finally, there is the escape of suicide. It, too, is no escape from life's realities, but 50 Americans each day take their lives.

Jesus Christ is the only escape, the only refuge, the only hiding place from life's staggering problems. He can take your sin, your defeat, your frustration and turn it all into victory. Will you let Him? Confess your sins to Him and then confess Him before man. Then He will give you a new heart and a new spirit and a new life. Then life will have meaning, joy and great purpose.

Free Check For Cars To Be October 17-22

Greensboro Vehicle Safety Check program is set for the week of October 17-22. Twelve check lanes will be set up all over Greensboro, where car owners can get a free voluntary 10-point safety check of their cars that will take only three or four minutes.

One of the check places includes a lane for this area and will be located in White Oak at the corner of Fairview and 14th Streets.

An experienced mechanic will be at each check lane and cars passing the inspection will get a windshield sticker. Lanes will be open from 9:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. each day. Prizes will be given each day based on a drawing of numbers given each driver going through for the check-up.

This program is being sponsored by the Greensboro J. C.'s under a Mayor's committee and it is hoped that through community wide support that it will be a success.

Matrons To Meet

White Oak Matron's Club will have a luncheon meeting Wednesday, October 19 at Proximity Y. They will see a hat style show.

Speaking of PUBLIC SAFETY

Three out of five traffic deaths occur during the hours of darkness, and Saturday remains the most dangerous night of the week. These and other facts are shown in a study of the most recent U. S. traffic accident records by the National Street and Traffic Safety Lighting Bureau.

Statistics vary state by state, but the rule of darkness is always clear. Though night traffic totals only 35 per cent of all traffic, night accidents claim nearly 50 per cent of all persons killed and more than 40 per cent of all those injured.

According to the Bureau, changing human nature to correct human failings which cause traffic accidents is a difficult, long-range project. A more direct and immediately rewarding method of curbing the traffic toll, as demonstrated by Indianapolis and a growing list of other communities, is to give the people adequate light so they can make their own way safely.

WHAT ONE CITY DID ABOUT IT
Indianapolis, Ind. 1954 1953
Night fatalities ... 25 36
Day fatalities ... 24 29

The entire fatality reduction of 1954 over 1953 was accomplished at night. It is evident, therefore, that the progressive street lighting program of the City of Indianapolis for the past several years is beginning to pay dividends.

Night's toll of 3 out of 5 traffic deaths, compared to other accident factors studied by the Bureau, gives convincing testimony to the wisdom of fighting traffic accidents with light.

Few motorists still drive automobiles of 1920 to 1930 vintage. Yet, most of our street lighting systems were designed to meet the needs of this era. Today's motorists and pedestrians, threatened by modern-day traffic hazards, need modern street lighting for their own protection, studies by the Bureau show.

KNOWLEDGE IS POWER

By Frank K. Levin

LANGUAGE STUDY

Is there an effective way to build vocabulary in the study of a foreign language?

Yes, use flash cards. A good size is 3"x5". Write the English word on one side, the foreign language word on the other. If the word is a noun, put illustrations from magazines or newspapers, and paste them on the side with the foreign language word. Carry the cards around, glance at them now and then at odd moments.

LITERATURE

Are books in a library arranged according to a system?

Yes, most libraries use the Dewey Classification. In the Dewey system there are the following main divisions:

600 General works
100 Philosophy
200 Religion
300 Sociology
400 Psychology
500 Natural sciences
600 Useful arts
700 Fine arts
800 Literature
900 History

To illustrate, 940 is a history text dealing with some aspect of the history of England. 941 deals with the history of Scotland, because Scotland is considered a division of English history. Once you acquaint yourself with this system you will find it easy to locate books on the shelves of the libraries employing the Dewey Classification.

SCIENCE
Here are clues to the names of perhaps the most famous brothers in American science. See how many clues you need before arriving at the answer:

(1) One was born in 1867, the other in 1871. (2) They opened a bicycle repair shop in Dayton, Ohio. (3) They started to manufacture bicycles in 1892. (4) Their first successful experiment lasted only 12 seconds. The final test lasted 59 seconds. (5) Their first machine was wrecked by a gust of wind after its successful effort. (6) They made an ages long ambition of man come true and founded a great industry. (Undoubtedly, you have guessed the references are to the Wright brothers.)

In response to many requests, the American School has published a booklet of these features. Copies may be had without charge by writing Frank K. Levin, 400 W. Madison St., Chicago 6, Ill.

among guests) for their excellent work. He then listed several ways in which the safety department and management could help the committees and promised that such additional help was to be given during the coming year.

Vice President Clarence Cone emphasized the importance of the work that the safety committees were doing and must still do. He said that he hoped some day soon to find that White Oak and Proximity Plants, instead of being on the "bottom of the list" of Cone plants, would have the best safety records in the company.

Brief remarks were also made by Chester Arnold, John Scott, and Sherman Basinger.

Frank Starling and Gordon Williams drew numbers for distribution of door prizes which had been arranged by Norman Pinkelton.

Wade Jenkins offered invocation.
